Mideast agreement is expected today

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israeli sources said they expect Moscow, Washington, Egypt and Israel to announce today that agreement has been reached on separating the Egyptian and Israeli armies.

Officials said the disengagement agreement would have to be submitted to the Mideast peace conference in Geneva.

The Israeli Cabinet apparently approved a plan worked out by U.S. Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, who has been in the Mideast since last Friday, shuttling between Jerusalem and Aswan, Egypt.

Sources said Israel might get only mutual understandings with Egypt, instead of a written pledge, on thinning out Arab forces east of the Suez Canal.

FBI's tape access records questioned

WASHINGTON (AP) - An assistant special prosecutor today questioned the reliability of Secret Service records showing who in the White House had access to the presidential tapes.

The new line of questioning developed a day after it was learned that the FBI had entered the investigation into who might have been responsible for the 181/2-minute gap in one of the subpoenaed tapes.

Robert Frank, an FBI spokesman, confirmed Wednesday night that Watergate Special Prosecutor Leon Jaworski had asked the bureau to enter the investigation.

In court today, Assistant Special Prosecutor Richard BenVeniste asked Raymond C. Zumwalt, a Secret Service technician, about the records he had of who had received and returned tapes.

Ben-Veniste pointed to a notation showing that presidential aide Stephen B. Bull had received tapes on July 10, 1973. Bull subsequently turned those tapes over to former White House staff chief, H.R.

Then Ben-Veniste pointed to a notation indicating the tapes were returned two days later and he asked, "would you show us where you have documentation for that

However, no one gave any indication of how the various points of disagreement previously reported were being resolved.

These include Israel's demand that Egyptian forces on the east bank of the canal be reduced and rocket and antiaircraft missile launchers on that side of the waterway be removed. Also included is Egypt's insistence that Israel commit itself to the position that its withdrawal of troops from the canal is the first step in a withdrawal from other occupied Arab

U.S. officials mentioned the possibility of private unwritten understandings between the two sides, and many Israelis believed these might include an Egyptian promise to end the formal state of war against Israel that has been in existence since the 1948 Palestine war. # Relaxation of pay guidelines possible

WASHINGTON (AP) — A forecast of bigger contract settlements this year from the government's top wage controller may indicate a relaxation of the administration's pay guidelines. "I would expect that the normal forces that operate on wages will result in higher settlements in 1974," said Director John T. Dunlop of the Cost of Living Council.

In meeting with newsmen Wednesday, Dunlop gave no indication that the council would hold wages to the 5.6 per cent average increase of contracts last year.

He also said he opposes any move into a new Phase 5 wage-price control program after legal authority for the Economic Stabilization Program expires in April.

But he said he would not rule out the possibility of continued Phase 4-type controls should Congress extend authority beyond the present April 30 expiration Dunlop said his recommendations are before the President, and that he and Treasury Secretary George P. Shultz would present the administration's proposal to Congress Feb. 6 in testimony before a Senate Banking subcommittee.

In the meantime, he said the council is weighing a proposal to lift price controls from several industries, including food manufacturing. He said there is general agreement that when controls are lifted from the retail end of the food business, "we should do it in one fell swoop."

Wage-price controls have been in effect in various forms since August 1971 as part of the administration's effort to control inflation. But the inflation rate increased from 3.4 per cent in 1972 to nearly 9 per cent last year, with projections of more of the same this year.

Dunlop said he expected "continued, substantial increases" in wholesale prices through April and an appreciable jump in retail food prices that "will further aggravate the situation.' The pressure of rising prices, a tightening labor market and high industry profits will push wage settlements up more this year than at any-time since the start of the controls program, he predicted. A number of major contracts come up this year and labor leaders are expected to be more militant in their demands. Dunlop expressed concern with bargaining early this year in the aluminum and can industries as well as in the reopening of the Teamsters contract.

Gasoline shortage figures worsening

WASHINGTON (AP) - An oil industry group has released figures that appear to signal a tightening of the Arab oil embargo and a worsening of the gasoline shortage. The American Petroleum Institute on Wednesday said imports decreased 12.2 per cent last week from the previous week. And the weekly report said U.S. gasoline stocks dropped by 3.6 million barrels.

But Rep. Silvio O. Conte, R-Mass., said he agrees with some of his constituents who feel that the energy crisis is "a trumped-up crisis by the oil companies to make more money.

Conte spoke during a House subcommittee hearing Wednesday at which oil industry critics testified that the country "is not nearly in as bad a situation as the oil industry and the administration would have us believe.

Middle East oil specialist Christopher T. Rand presented the subcommittee with Petroleum Institute figures from December, which he said showed that the gasoline shortage could easily be made up from existing stocks. He said the figures also indicated that the oil companies were exaggerating the severity of the crisis in an effort to drive up prices.

"They know a ten-cent increase in the cost of a gallon of gasoline will result in $4 billion in additional revenue," Rand said. However, the latest API figures, released Wednesday, showed that oil imports dropped sharply last week. The drop wiped out a brief upturn in imports, which had been attributed to leakage of the Arab oil cutoff. According to the figures, imports averaged 4.9 million barrels per day during the week ending Jan. 11, a decrease of 677,000 barrels from the previous week.

And gasoline stocks dropped to a level usually reached only in midsummer, the

The credibility of such data supplied by the petroleum industry was the subject of the hearings being held by the House subcommittee on regulatory agencies.

Washington lawyer Martin Lobel told the subcommittee Wednesday that the data provided by the oil companies is "unaudited and unverified.'

Carnival operator enters Fair contract controversy

Charges that the Murphy Brothers Shows, Inc., Tulsa, Okla., have not complied with state statutes requiring outof-state firms to pay corporate franchise taxes on their earnings in Missouri were levied Thursday by E. V. Love, McDonald, Mo., a national carnival operator.

Love earlier had sought to obtain contract to provide midway attractions at the 1974 Missouri State Fair. The contract was awarded to the Murphy firm Friday. State Sen. Richard Webster (R-Carthage) Wednesday criticized awarding the bid to the Murphys, emphasizing that Love had submitted a higher guaranteed return to

Webster then introduced a bill in the Legislature to require state contracts on services to go to the lowest Missouri bidder, if the services are equal to out-ofstate firms also seeking the contract. Love indicated to the Democrat-Capital

Thursday he verified the failure of the Murphy firm to pay the franchise tax and out-of-state registration fee Wednesday with the office of Secretary of State James Kirkpatrick. He said he was told by Gary Ryan, corporate counsel for Kirkpatrick's office, that a maximum fine of $1,000 for each of the carnival's appearances in Sedalia be levied against the firm.

In addition to appearing at the Missouri

State Fair for the past three years, Love said, the Murphy firm has also provided midway attractions once a year for the past five years, in both Jackson and St. Louis Counties in Missouri.

"They (Murphy brothers) could owe up to $13,000, based on this," Love said.

Love said he was advised that, under state statutes, legal efforts to collect the fines must proceed in the counties in which the alleged offenses were committed, with any fines collected to be kept in the county.

Nine men were missing after a rock and earth slide smothered a telephone company blockhouse in Oregon, and three young mountaineers were killed in an avalanche in Wyoming.

Several other weather-related deaths were reported as flooding and other bad weather struck the northwest area of the Frank Betts, chief ranger at Grand Teton National Park, identified the dead mountaineers as David W. Silha, 20, Minneapolis; Michael J. Moseley, 24, Metairie, La.; and Bart I. Brodsky, 18, Philadelphia. He said they were killed in an avalanche Wednesday at the 9,500-foot level in the Grand Tetons.

Nine persons were thought to be in or near a Pacific Northwest Bell Co. concrete blockhouse near Canyonville, Ore., when a massive landslide buried it Wednesday

Authorities moved heavy equipment to the scene to dig for possible survivors, then abandoned the rescue attempt temporarily until geologists could gauge the danger of further slides.

The Oregon landslide came in the wake of heavy rains and an early snow melt that sent already swollen streams in many areas of the Pacific Northwest surging to new highs.

The storm left its soggy impact on western Montana, Idaho, northeastern Washington, Western Oregon and Northern California

Dams broke and mudslides blocked highways. Hundreds of families were forced from their homes by floodwaters.

At Myers Flat, on a branch of the Eel River in Northern California, 14-year-old Jimmy Moore and his 12-year-old sister, Kathy, died Wednesday when a dam created by a logjam burst and surging water swept them from the backyard of their home.

Sheriff's Lt. Robert Williams said the youngsters were helping their father, Emery, move property to higher ground when they were swept to their deaths.

Moore escaped. His wife was in the family home, which was torn loose by the swirling water. She escaped death when the house washed back to shore after being bill reinstating capital punishment for 11

Senate speed limit bill changes refused

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) - The Missouri House refused today to go along with Senate changes in a bill to lower the speed limit to 55 miles per hour and asked for a conference committee to work out the differences.

The House sponsor, Rep. Richard DeCoster, D-Conton, said the Senate version would lock the limit into law and a special legislative session would have to be called to change the limit, if the federal limit of 55 is changed.

The Senate opposed allowing the governor to set the limit. Gov. Christopher S. Bond said Wednesday, "The important thing is to get a limit at 55. It would be less flexible to have the legislature have to come back and change the limit." He would not say whether he would veto the

WHICH COSTS MORE? ONE DAY'S ELECTRICITY OR TWO GALLONS OF GAS.

Let's keep budget talk simple. In the last twenty years, most goods and services have risen to four times their original cost. But not electrical power. Its cost to the average customer has only risen by one-third in 20 years. And it's still less than 2% of the average family budget. Today, one day's electricity for the average family* costs about the same as two gallons of gas. Or a few cents less.

Think of all the everyday conveniences that electricity affords. Even the electricity is a necessity, it's good to know it is still a mighty

Replacement tax is sought

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) -Legislators and the governor's office agree that the tax on personal property tax should be repealed, but they disagree on what should replace it.

Repeal of the household goods tax was approved by the voters in 1972 and it was one of the first regular session bills to get a committee hearing in the Senate Wednesday. It is sponsored by Sen. William Cason, D-Clinton.

Cason said the tax was unfair because persons with low incomes had to pay as much tax on their property as wealthy persons. He spoke before the Senate's Ways and Means Committee.

County's budget requests are revealed here

A total of $397,632.33 has been requested for 1974 by 22 county offices and agencies that receive funds from the county, according to statistics in the county clerk's

This figure is slightly higher than the $394,412.22 that was allocated to the county agencies last year, but fails to include employe pensions and social security budgets which were included in the budget requests last year, County Clerk Mary Jane Wilson said.

The requests are still subject to change by the offices and agencies and must be approved yet by the county court.

As of Thursday, the only countysupported agency which had failed to submit a budget request was the Pettis County Civil Defense Agency

The county budget will be higher due to a 5.5 per cent wage increase for non-elected county employes, which went into effect

Budget requests for 1974 are as follows: County Court, $14,400; county clerk, $26,010; treasurer, $12,430; collector, $6,630; assessor, $37,920; recorder, $29,088.43; prosecuting attorney, $22,021.25; coroner, $2,200; public administrator, $1,063.08; county engineer, $9,323.25; surveyor, $650; juvenile office, $15,781; court reporter, $5,314.28; Circuit Court, $7,500; Magistrate Court, $2,613.78; Circuit Court clerk, $27,539; Probate Court, $26,490; problem drinking counselor, $1,050; Pettis County Welfare Office, $14,191.21; county health nurse, $12,417.05; Pettis County Extension Center, $23,000; sheriff's department,

The salaries of the Circuit Court judge, Magistrate Court judge and Magistrate Court clerk are not paid with county funds, Mrs. Wilson said.

The sheriff's department operations will be financed in 1974 with federal revenue sharing funds. The social security and pension plan payments are included into this budget request.

Contest assured when Republican files for seat

The first councilman contest of the April city elections was assured Wednesday afternoon with the filing of Robert Eidson, 2601 South Stewart, as a Republican from the Fourth Ward Incumbent Fourth Ward Councilman Lee D. Garrison, 2211 South Missouri, a Democrat, filed for re-election Jan. 7.

Eidson, wire chief supervisor for the local Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. office, has appeared before the council several times in recent months to support the establishment of a full-time mayor position. The council has not yet made a decision on the issue.

Eidson declined to immediately comment on his upcoming campaign, pending the completion of a company employe meeting in which he is involved.

"After I get that out of the way, I'll gather my thoughts and issue a statement, Eidson said.

Other Republicans already filing for office have been Mayor Jerry Jones, who seeks re-election, and Ralph Hamlin for police judge. Democrats, in addition to Garrison, who have filed for office are City Collector Mrs. Opal Hugelman, Second Ward Councilman Ira Knox, First Ward Councilman Jesse "Sonny" Robinson, third ward Councilman Bob Wells and Police Judge Lawrence Englund, they all seek re-election.

Love said he is also investigating charges that illegal gambling occurred during last year's Fair and will soon reveal his findings to Bert Hurn, U.S. district attorney for the western district of Missouri, and Fleming.

"Although I haven't directly seen it myself, I have received strong indications from reliable sources to indicate that gambling did, in fact, occur," Love said.

Love said he is also researching the possibility that the contract between the state and Mruphy Brothers may be illegal, in view of the firm's alleged neglect to officially register with the state and pay required taxes.

"I expect to contact the attorney general's office within a week," Love said. "I feel confident the contract will be viewed as illegal.

Responding to Fair Secretary Ron Jones' statement Wednesday that the midway contract was not awarded to him because Fair officials did not have the opportunity to view his carnival operation, Love said, "that is ridiculous and only a make-weight ploy. He hasn't seen the show the Murphy Brothers plan to bring to the Fair this year either because the Murphy Brothers haven't even seen it yet. They were advertising for rides in December. They haven't got their line-up, so Jones couldn't have seen them. He's just using this as an Love's attorney, Robert Young, Pineville, Mo., has been a business associate of Webster. However, Webster said Wednesday he had no motives for becoming involved in the midway-contract matter except to see Missouri firms awarded contracts. "I have no business connections with Bob Yocum," Webster said. He and Yocum were involved in an airplane sharing arrangement a few years ago. Yocum is a former state representative.

From small clips can big plants grow?

By POLLY CRAMER

DEAR POLLY - My Pet Peeve is with those persons who get in the express lane at the supermarket and have more than the allotted number of items as well as those who hold up this line as they write checks. Such a line is intended for those in a hurry as well as for those who want only a few things so I think the cashiers and store managers should not let such people get by with this rude and inconsiderate habit.

DEAR POLLY - Like Terri I, too, had pipes showing under my kitchen sink so I bought an extending curtain rod that fits between the two cabinets on each side of the sink On this rod I hung a curtain to match the ones at the windows. Everyone who has seen it and who has exposed pipes has done the same thing. - MRS. M. B. H.

DEAR POLLY - I want to tell Terri how I hid the pipes beneath a bathroom lavatory. An enclosure of wood was placed on two sides with a wooden louvered door in the middle that serves to ventilate the space beneath which can be used for storage of small items. - MARY W.

DEAR POLLY — When I was rushing to clean the leaves out of a gutter before the heavy rains came I could not steady the ladder because of a slope in the driveway but found that the slant of the head on an old golf club was just what I needed for dragging the wooden gutter and removing most of the leaves. This eliminated that danger of falling from a ladder which is even more risky for those of us who have reached the half century mark. - JANET S.

Polly's problem

DEAR POLLY - I would like to grow chrysanthemums from clippings so would like to know how to make the clippings and any instructions for starting such plants. I hope some of the readers have done this and can help me out. - THELMA.

A DIFFERENT DINING EXPERIENCE.

How long since you've enjoyed a Prime Rib Sandwich? An Omelet for lunch!! Ever heard of the Fireside Deluxe? French Onion au Fromage Cratinne? (We, don't try to pronounce it, just write it down and let the chef worry about the darn thing!) Shrimp de Jonghe en Coquille . . . another little touch of class!! Ho Hum ....

Then, of course, among numerous other things you'll find the old luncheon standbys . . . . Reuben, Pattie-Melt, Char-Burger, Club, Steak Sandwiches, etc., etc. and your favorite steaks, sea food and special entrees for dinner . . . . served on our tiny cocktail tables . . . . without tablecloths. Now that HAS to be unusual!

Anyway, it's all on our new menus, prepared by our new chef, served from our new kitchen . . . probably by a new waitress. So meet the gang for lunch (11:00-2:00) or dinner (5:00-8:00) then stay around and dance to the marvelous music of what ever group happens to wander in. (They're all very talented)

It adds up to excellent food and a very pleasant experience in a comfortable, informal and friendly atmosphere . . . at YOUR place

Secret love never fulfilled

Dear Ann Landers: I was impressed with the letter signed "Needing Peace of Mind" because it so closely parallels my own experience.

I am also 45 and was in love with a girl in England 15 years ago. She was much younger than I, beautiful and willing, but I just couldn't bring myself to have sexual relations with her. I have kicked myself many

I left England and put the girl out of my mind. Five years later, I married a fine Canadian woman who has been a devoted wife and mother. But like that other man who wrote. I have never been able to get the English girl out of my system. I considered handing my wife that column of yours, and confessing that I, too, was harboring a secret love that was never fulfilled. Is it possible that I might free myself of the recurring day (and night) dreams by telling my wife of my yearning? She's a marvelously understanding woman, and I do love her. Ann, but there's always that nagging feeling. -Bittersweet

Dear B.: The one that got away always seems like more of a prize than the one you caught - but it ain't necessarily so. My advice is to say nothing. Sounds to me as if you lucked out.

Dear Ann Landers: You frequently print letters about people who are struggling with problems of overweight. excessive smoking and alcoholism. This letter will be a little different.

I married a lovely gal whose family has a heavy history of diabetes - three generations, to be exact. My wife tends toward obesity and I insisted that she watch her weight and be checked regularly.

Meanwhile, I am a health nut - slim, exercise regularly, and take pride in my physical condition. By now you've probably guessed it. I took a routine check-up last week and the tests show that I have diabetes. I am 20 pounds underweight and no one in our family has had the disease. I am more furious than concerned.

of? - Monroe, La. Dear M.L.: Similar things have happened in families where the non-smoker gets lung cancer and the nicotine addict goes scot-free. Such are the ironies of life, but odds are stacked heavily against it.

Isn't this the rottenest, most unfair thing you've ever heard

Dear Ann Landers: I'm a 17year-old girl who isn't writing to ask what to do about acne or how to get a certain guy to notice me. What I want to know is why people don't pay more attention to their elderly relatives in nursing homes.

I work at this place weekends, and it's heartbreaking the way so many of these darling old people hope day after day that someone will come to see them and nobody shows up. Of course, some are forgetful and a little confused, but they are so lonesome. I have chatted for hours with these dear people and they are so grateful for my time and attention

I hope every person who has a relative or even knows of someone who is in a nursing

lowa offers plenty of outdoor sports

By BILL HORINE

Written for Associated Press CHEROKEE, Iowa (AP) — Iowa for corn, right? But Iowa for hunting, fishing and skiing? You better believe it.

The average non-Iowan doesn't think of Iowa when it comes to outdoor sports but the state has plenty to offer.

Right now Iowa outdoor enthusiasts are busy ice fishing. hunting quail and rabbit, propelling snowmobiles over frozen fields and skiing down snowy slopes and across the trails of the wide open spaces.

By the middle of January. the pheasant hunters have left the Iowa cornfields. But the ice fishermen are busy pulling in perch, walleye and northern pike fish from frozen lakes and

The top location for ice fishing is the Iowa great lakes area in the northwest. Sportsmen fish East and West Okoboji lakes, Spirit Lake, and Center Lake in that sector.

Fishermen who place their small jigs, grubs or minnows four to six inches from the bottom in about 12 feet of water often are rewarded with their legal limit of 25 perch in a half hour or less. Perch average one-half to three-quarters of a

It is while the perch hit fast that the biggest northerners usually feed. Walleye and bluegill fishing usually follows the perch run by about two weeks.

Fishermen find success along the Mississippi River where it skirts the state's northeast border. Artificial lakes in southwest Iowa also draw many fishermen in the winter.

Hunters say Iowa's best rabbit and quail hunting is in the southwest, south central and southeast counties.

The quail season ends Jan. 31, and the daily bag limit is eight birds, with a possession limit of 16. Iowans kill as many as two million quail a year. Coyotes can be found in southern sections. The cover and food are to their liking, and many hunters bag a covote or two every winter.

Central and southern Iowa usually have a marginal snow cover. Northern counties often are 10-15 degrees colder than the rest of the state. Good snow cover for snowmobilers and skiiers is available in the north.

Several good ski resorts have sprung up in northern and central Iowa, and many have slopes of 750-2,600 feet in length. Some vertical drops reach 200-300 feet.

Rope tows, T-bars or chair lifts are available on slopes. More than half the resorts have snow-making equipment. The fastest growing cold weather sport in the Hawkeye state is cross country or tour skiing. The sport requires only two inches of snow.

There are plenty of wide-open spaces, and state and county parks in which to ski.

Since 1864, there have been only four presidential elections in which all third par-ties together polled more than 10 per cent of the vote. The leading third-parties in these elections were: the Populists (James Baird Weaver) in 1892, the National Progressives (Theodore Roosevelt) in 1912, the La Follette Progressives in 1924, and George Wallace's American Party in 1968, The World Almanac recalls

WASHINGTON - Last week the White House announced an end to President Nixon's "Operation Candor." The reason given for closing down the operation was that the President had laid to rest all the Watergate-related charges against him. With the release of the two white papers on ITT and the milk fund, the Administration felt there were no further questions to be answered about Mr. Nixon's role in all the strange political happenings of 1973.

There was a certain worked so hard to bring the truth to the American people amount of sadness in Washington when the White House made its announcement. Those most affected by the shutting down of Operation Candor were the special staff at the White House who had

I went over there to see how they were taking it. Some secretaries were crying, several press agents were cleaning out their desks. One Madison Avenue man was passing around champagne.

'What do you want me to do with this photograph of Rose Mary Woods showing how she erased the 18-minute tape?" a secretary asked

"Throw it away," Diogenes said. "It served its purpose.

"Should I put these copies of the President's income tax returns in a file box?" another secretary asked.

"No, shred them. Someday some anti-Nixon historian might try to make something of them.'

"What do you want me to do with this picture of Lincoln?" an office boy asked.

"Put it in the file box. We may need it

"It must be tough to close down an operation like this," I said to Diogenes.

'It breaks your heart," he replied. "Operation Candor will go down as one of the great achievements of the Nixon Administration. We took a President whose credibility was at its lowest ebb whose statements were being questioned every day, whose finances were muddied by conflicting evidence, and we proved he was not a crook.'

"How did you do it?"

"By being completely frank with the American people. The President decided that certain questions of impropriety had to be answered. At Disney World he said he had never taken advantage of any of the usual tax gimmicks that most Americans use, such as cattle, real estate and interest. He told the governors there would be no more bombshells over Watergate and, except for the 18-minute hum on one tape. there were none. He said he would explain his dealings with ITT and the milk fund to everyone's satisfaction - and he did. Thanks to Operation Candor, the Roper Poll revealed last week, a whopping 21 per cent of the American people do not believe that the President is guilty of any of the serious charges made against him.

'And you did all of that right here in this office?" I asked in amazement

"I guess you could say that," Diogenes admitted. "But we couldn't have done it without the President. When you've got an impeccable product to sell, it's a lot easier. If you want the truth, we were victims of our own success. When I recruited this staff for Operation Candor, I thought it would take three years to refute all the terrible things that were being said about the President. You can imagine my surprise when it took only three months to lay every charge to rest.

"What do you plan to do now that Operation Candor is over?" I asked

"I think I'll go back to my old job."

"What's that?"

"Selling used cars."

WASHINGTON - Perhaps we can shed more light on how Henry Kissinger and his military aides wound up spying on one

It grew out of the frustrations of the Joint Chiefs of Staff over President Nixon's obsessive secrecy. They were often kept in the dark about world moves which affected

To keep better informed, Adm. Thomas Moorer, the JCS chairman, set up his own pipeline into the White House. He received photocopies of documents that had been filched right out of Kissinger's secret files.

These were delivered by the Joint Chiefs' liaison officer at the White House, Rear Adm. Robert O. Welander, to Moorer's executive assistant, Capt. Arthur K. Knoizen, who presumably turned them over to Moorer.

Knoizen also circulated some of the documents to the other military chiefs. Nothing appeared in writing to indicate the documents had been copied from Kissinger's files. But sometimes Knoizen sent a cover memo warning of the "sensitivity" of the material

Another Navy officer, Capt. Howard N. Kay, represented the Joint Chiefs at meetings of Kissinger's hush-hush Washington Special Action Group. Afterward, Kay submitted reports of the meetings, stamped "Secret-Sensitive," to Separate sets of minutes, intended for the Pentagon's official use, were signed jointly by G. Warren Nutter, then as assistant defense secretary, and James H. Noyes, a deputy assistant secretary. But known to the civilian leaders, Kay's more detailed minutes were routed out-ofchannel directly to the Joint Chiefs.

In December 1971, we quoted from secret documents to prove that Nixon and Kissinger had lied to the American people about the U.S. role in the India-Pakistan conflict. This led to an intensive search for Merry-go-round

The investigation, directed by former Kissinger aide David R. Young Jr., utilized wiretaps, lie detectors and other quasilegal tactics. But instead of uncovering our sources, the "plumbers" stumbled upon the Pentagon spy ring.

FOOTNOTE: Captain Knoizen told us there had been absolutely nothing surreptitious nor sinister about the documents he received from the White House and circulated to the Joint Chiefs. Captain Kay acknowledged that he had written memos for the Joint Chiefs summarizing Kissinger's meetings. He insisted this was perfectly proper since he had been the "action officer" for the Joint Chiefs. Neither Welander nor Kissinger could be reached for comment, although Kissinger told us earlier he had no knowledge of Young's activities after he joined the "plumbers.

AUTOS AND ANTITRUST: Senate trustbusters are readying plans to strip General Motors, Ford and, to a lesser extent, Chrysler of their subsidiaries. The groundwork will be laid at public hearings

Chopping down the motor monsters to a more competitive size, the trustbusters believe, would have saved the automobile industry from the economic impact of the

Now, dealers are stuck with 100-day backlogs of unsold gas guzzlers. This has forced the manufacturers to shut down production lines, idling almost 100,000 auto

General Motors, with only a quarter of its production in small cars, anticipates a sales drop of 8 to 12 per cent this year. Ford and Chrysler are desperately trying to turn 50 per cent of their production to smaller, gas-saving cars.

This will be explored in open testimony next month by Sen. Phil Hart's antitrust subcommittee. The committee's secret study indicates that if more smaller companies like American Motors manufactured cars, parts and accessories, the abrupt shift from big to small cars would be far less painful.

Hart, a Democrat from the motor state of Michigan, will chair the hearings. But the background for the first week-long session will come largely from a young lawyer, Bradford Snell, who for months has been working 12-hour days on a strategy for breaking up the auto giants without harming the economy.

Hart's plan is not to split General Motors into independent companies for Chevrolets, Pontiacs, Buicks and Cadillacs, repectively, or to break up Ford into separate Ford, Mercury and Lincoln companies.

Instead, he believes the erormous economic power of the "Big Two" can be curbed simply by requiring them to give up their dealerships, their parts and accessories subsidiaries, their truck divisions and financing and insurance

Snell has worked out an elaborate divestment plan, which is now locked up in the subcommittee's safe.

For the February hearings, Hart plans to call in experts from the federal government, business world and academic community to present their ideas for improving competition in the auto industry and avoiding such economic catastrophes as the fuel crisis has brought on.

Later, the auto moguls will be invited to present their views at another round of

President improves his case

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

WASHINGTON - Belatedly - he seems to do so many things belatedly - the President now has responded at some length to two of the most serious charges leveled against him. His explanations as to the "milk deal" and the matter of ITT strike me as honest accounts. Mr. Nixon has helped his case before the people.

bribery. This is among the specific offenses for which impeachment can be sought. It was alleged that in return for a $427,000 contribution from the milk producers toward his re-election, the President authorized an increase in milk subsidy payments. It was alleged that in return for a $200,000 offer from an ITT subsidiary toward expense of a Republican convention in San Diego, Mr.Nixon personally intervened to assure a favorable settlement of ITT's antitrust troubles.

In both cases the

The operative words here are "in return for." This is the essence of bribery: the quid for the quo. In my own view, at least, last week's White House statements effectively demolish the accusations. The higher milk subsidies were authorized largely as a consequence of certain political realities; the ITT settlement resulted chiefly from an assessment of certain legal probabilities. The milk contributions and the ITT offer had nothing to do with the decisions that were made.

This I believe. Admittedly, the White House statements do not tidy up every loose end. In the ITT affair, we have yet to receive a satisfactory explanation for a number of inconsistent statements by former Attorneys General John Mitchell and Richard Kleindienst. In the milk affair, we have yet to be told why the milk producers, in August of 1969, delivered $100,000 in cash to the President's fundraising attorney, Herbert W. Kalmbach. Why in cash? Why Kalmbach? Why in August of 1969, three full years before a reelection campaign? How did it happen that the President had "no knowledge of this contribution?

These doubts cannot overcome the President's own straight-forward account of the events in March and April of 1971. The milk producers, to speak to this matter only, had two things going for them in their effort to win a higher support price: They had a reasonably good case on the merits. and of greater significance, they had powerful friends on Capitol Hill.

The latter point was the key point. In any realistic political assessment, it was clear that one way or another, the producers would get the 90 per cent price they wanted. They had such potent allies in the House as Speaker Carl Albert and Agriculture Chariman W. R. Poage. In the Senate, their 90 per cent bill bore such names as Humphrey, Muskie, McGovern, Hughes, Bayh, Hartke and Harris - an impressive array, all told, of 28 Democrats and 1 Republican. If the President didn't act, the Democrats would. So he acted. Any prudent politician, under the same circumstances, would have done the same

The two white papers released by the White House come on top of earlier statements dealing with the President's taxes, his property acquisitions, and the improvements to his home. He now has responded, if I am not mistaken, to every allegation of personal misconduct. Most of the other charges most prominently mentioned — the bombing of Cambodia the impoundment of funds, the actions he himself took in the name of national security — appear to involve the conduct of his office.

My own impression, for what it may be worth, is that the President's accusers have about exhausted their ammunition. Unless they have evidence - hard evidence - not yet disclosed, they are not going to be able to make a convincing case that would justify his conviction for "treason, bribery or other high crimes and misdemeanors.

Mickey Mantle, Ford: Opposites that attract

NEW YORK (AP) — Mickey Mantle and Whitey Ford, always a study in contrasts, today have something very basic in common. The longtime New York Yankee teammates are the newest members of baseball's Hall of Fame.

Mantle, eligible for the first time, and Ford, on the ballot for the second time, both received more than the required 75 per cent of the 365 ballots cast by members of the Baseball Writers Association of America. Mantle was named on 322 ballots and Ford on 284 with 272 the number necessary for election. They will be inducted into the baseball shrine at Cooperstown, N.Y. this sum-

Mantle was a country boy from Commerce, Okla., a shy slugger who never felt at home in the big city but achieved stardom with raw talent for hitting a baseball farther than most other players.

Ford was a product of the city, born and bred in New York with a brash, cocky demeanor and a combination of guile and ability that made him one of the game's best pitchers.

They arrived in New York a year apart in the early 1950s and discovered an affinity for each other. It was a partnership that flourished during the Yankee glory years when Mantle and Ford as teammates and roommates led the club to repeated American League pennants and world champion-

Mantle's awesome power produced 536 career home runs most ever by a switch hitter and Ford's crafty style was good for a 236-106 record and a .690 percentage, best ever among pitchers with more than 200 victories. Both broke World Series records owned by the immortal Babe Ruth - Mantle for home runs and Ford for consecutive scoreless innings.

They were an all but unbeatable combination on the field and relished each other's company off it. "We always enjoyed being around each other," said Mantle.

Don't pick pimples

DEAR DR. LAMB - Some time ago my son picked a pimple on his nose, and the pressure of the fluid in it flew across the room. He hardly got it stopped bleeding. Now this pimple is a red spot that rises up at times, but he never makes sinus thrombosis, and the the mistake of reopening it

A few weeks ago I was reading in the paper items of 50 years ago. There was a story about a young man picking a pimple on his face and in a short time he was dead. I assume he bled to death. I don't have the name of the disease but it still worries me about my son. Could he have the same thing as this man? Could you tell me the name of this disease and what can be done about it? I like to read your column every day as you give plain, everyday advice I can understand, so hope you can help me

DEAR READER guess is that your son has a very small artery at the surface of the skin. When he succeeded in breaking it, the high pressure in the small artery caused the blood to squirt. An artery will actually pump blood out with each heartbeat in a spurting fashion. A vein merely allows blood to flow out. There is a lot more pressure inside an artery than there is inside a vein.

I doubt the man you read about in the paper had the same problem your son has. Fifty years ago we didn't have antibiotics to combat infections. The man probably ruptured his pimple and some of the infected material spread into the surrounding tissue and was picked up by the blood. The nose and mouth area is particularly rich in tiny blood vessels, especially veins.

The infection can be carried by the veins in this area to the brain. Here it sets up an infection in the large venous sinuses or large pockets of blood encased around the brain called the cavernous sinus. When these are infected large clots can form in them, a condition called cavernous infection is very dangerous. This is one of the main reasons people are always advised against squeezing pimples around the nose and mouth.

Today when an infection does occur it can be quickly treated with antibiotics. So, it is not the dreaded rare complication it used to be. Nevertheless, it is still good advice not to squeeze forcefully on pimples. Rather it is best to let them mature and then carefully lift off the top and gently express the material. The area should be cleaned with alcohol first and a clean needle also sterilized or at least soaked in alcohol used. Never squeeze hard.

Your son should leave his spot alone. It might be worthwhile seeing if he can have the spot treated with an electric needle. A dermatologist should be able to treat it easily so that it will not be a problem in the future for him and will not affect his appearance. But, I think you can put your mind at ease about the possibility that he has the same problem you read about.

now, and energy usage studies might become a big new specialty for outside management consultants and for in-house productivity specialists.

Fuel use can be reduced

Laurens van den Muyzenberg, an industrial manage ment consultant, maintains that the energy reduction potential for almost all plants is more than 10 per cent, and that for many companies it is far above that figure. Management's interest is aroused by such estimates, especially when the plant manager reports, as is likely to be the case, that he has never conducted an energy usage study of his premises.

Corporate management in the past seldom considered such studies, being more concerned with labor and capital costs than with energy costs. Much waste developed, therefore, and now it can easily be eliminated.

Van den Muyzenberg, president of H.B. Maynard & Co., Pittsburgh and London, began what he calls energy value analyses a few weeks ago and has zeroed in on what he believes are among the most wasteful practices.

To spot these areas, he suggests to company management that four responsible employes be appointed to determine just where energy is being used.

One studies consumption in mobile equipment, another in heating-ventilation-air conditioning, the third in production itself, and the fourth in auxilliary equipment, such as compressors.

These four employes must survey the plant, learn where energy is used and hunt for savings. They make out an energy budget and bring it to a steering committee, where an energy spending plan is developed. Elapsed time: two weeks. Some companies, he found, are unable immediately to determine how energy is expended because batteries of equipment are hooked up to the same meters. He recommends multiple monitors or meters.

Just in case you do have to cut back, van den Muyzenberg says, "you have to be ready to drop that customer first who gives you the lowest dollar return per calorie expended."

Bond's net worth without cutting productivity at $717,000

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) - Gov. Christopher S. Bond said Wednesday his net worth is about $717,000

The estimate does not include a car, furniture or a checking account. Bond said he set up a blind trust agreement with the Wilmington Trust Co., of Delaware in September. The agreement gives them power to invest in stocks, bonds or "whatever they see fit," he said.

Under the contract, Bond said, he cannot get details on how the money is being managed.

Bond's parents and grandparents operated A. P. Green Refractories in Mexico, Mo., where he grew up, but he no longer has any interest in the firm other than $100,000 worth of convertible preferred stock in U.S. Gypsum, which has controlling interest in A. P. Green Refractories.

However, in March, Bond said, he will turn the U.S. Gypsum stock over to the trust Asked what stocks the blind trust is involved in, he said, "I have no idea what's in there.'

Contracting with a firm in another state, he said, was the best way to avoid conflict of in-

The governor's worth was listed at about $900,000 shortly after he was elected. He attributed the loss to a drop of U.S. Gypsum stock from $27 a share

He sold his house in Jefferson City upon moving into the governor's mansion and now does not own any real estate in Missouri.

LP gas users facing higher costs

A mild early winter, energyconscious consumers and the increasing popularity of woodburning stoves and fireplaces have helped to ease the LP gas shortage in the Sedalia area, local dealers said.

However, the situation is still not rosy for the consumer. The price of LP gas has increased by as much as 100 per cent in the last six months. And new customers are having a tough time finding a supplier.

Bill Burkholder, owner of Burkholders, Inc., 118 West Second, said he has been able to keep his customers "in good shape" this winter. "There haven't been any short fills, but then again we don't have any excess, either," he said.

"Many customers, it's true, aren't using as much LP... They're using their fireplaces more and wood stoves, too. I'm glad to see it."

Burkholder said although he has received only 80 per cent of his January request for LP gas. the decreased usage has not forced him to "short fill" any of his customers.

"I'm still not taking on any new business," he said, however. "I just can't."

John Bribiesca, manager of Sedalia Skelgas Service, Clinton Road and 25th, said he is now receiving 100 per cent of his requested January allocation. From September to November, he said, his company only received 85 per cent of its requested allocation while in December that figure was reduced to 79 per cent. The increase in the January allocation, he said, is partly due to a decrease in usage which, in turn, is partly due to mild weather in November and December.

Bribiesca said his company is in "pretty good shape now." He said the only persons who have run out of LP gas have been those who have experienced "credit problems." He said he won't take on any new customers who are presently being serviced by another LP gas dealer. However, he said he accepted one new customer who moved to Sedalia from another town.

Norman Trautman, manager of Co-op LP Gas Service, Main and Washington, said he's been "getting by" on his approximately 90 per cent allocation. "It's not good and not bad," Trautman said of his situation.

Mrs. Irel Adams of Adams-Riley Rural Gas, Inc., 401 West Main, said her company has been getting "about as much" as it received last year from its Phillips Petroleum Co., supplier. "We have enough," she said.

Both Mrs. Adams and Trautman said their companies are rejecting new customers.

Three of the four dealers refused to disclose their LP gas prices. Burkholders, however, said he is selling LP gas at 29.9 cents a gallon per 1,000 gallons and 30.9 cents a gallon for 500 gallons.

He said all of his increases to customers have been caused by price increases levied by his supplier.

Although no information was supplied by the other three companies, sources said LP gas prices have risen locally to as much as 35.9 and 36.9 cents per gallon. In August, prices were around 17 cents per gallon. When asked the price of LP gas at Adams-Riley, Mss. Adams responded, "I'm not quoting prices... That's all you hear and read about these days - this oil business. I'm sick of Trautman said the last time his company's LP gas prices were quoted, "it stirred up trouble" among his customers. Although refusing to quote a price. Bribiesca said his prices were higher than 18.4 cents a gallon, the price the company

Will prices continue to raise? I have no idea," said Burkholder, "Three months ago I thought they were going as high as they would. You need a crystal ball.
